Respected Sir/Madam,

██████████ and ██████ currently ██████████ respectfully request registration of an FIR against Mr. Deepak Kumar Daga, Chartered Accountant, Hyderabad, for offences involving dowry-linked financial coercion, criminal intimidation, conspiracy, suppression of justice, and interference in child custody and marital reconciliation.

The facts presented are not isolated or accidental. They point to a deliberate and continuing course of conduct spanning several years, culminating in direct threats, financial pressure, and endangerment of ██████ minor ██████████.

1. Dowry Demands Made by Mr. Deepakji Daga Against the ██████████, Under Coercion

Although Mr. Deepakji Daga is not a blood relative of ██████████ he positioned himself as a power broker controlling outcomes in ██████ marriage, and repeatedly demanded and extracted money from ██████, the ██████████, in the form of dowry, under veiled pretenses such as:

- “Settlement”
- “Family peace”
- “Resolving matrimonial issues”
- “Avoiding false criminal cases”
- “Ensuring access to ██████ child”

These demands were not voluntary. They were accompanied by explicit and implicit threats, including:

- “We will ensure your total annihilation”
- Threats of false dowry, domestic violence (DV), and criminal cases
- Threats of illegal arrest and harm in custody through the misuse of police influence
- Threats of financial destruction via fabricated income tax actions, police harassment, or political connections

As a result, money was paid under fear, domination, and coercion, satisfying the legal ingredients of dowry demand and extortion, even though the recipient is a third party.

Judicial precedent (e.g., TOI Jaipur Case, 2024) recognises that non-relatives who demand or take dowry, or abet such demand, are liable under criminal law. Hence, Mr. Daga's conduct is squarely prosecutable.

2. Prolonged Financial Extortion via Associates & Coercive Routing of Funds

Over an extended period, [REDACTED] was coerced into making significant financial payments strictly at the instructions of Mr. Deepakji Daga, including:

- payments to his associates or intermediaries,
- expenses for his personal and family needs, and
- amounts toward land, jewellery, education, and other items for his family unrelated to any legal obligation on [REDACTED] part.

These transactions were neither voluntary nor contractual, and were sustained through explicit threats, including false criminal cases, arrest, and financial ruin via tax and police misuse.

This pattern reveals a systematic design of dowry extraction and financial extortion, not isolated family transactions.

Further, the opaque routing of funds, especially through third-party and family accounts, raises reasonable suspicion of potential financial offences such as:

- benami transactions,
- money laundering,
- tax evasion, and
- banking violations.

These concerns merit a thorough police and financial investigation.

A detailed professional misconduct complaint has already been filed before ICAI, reinforcing the gravity and continuity of Mr. Daga's coercive financial conduct. However, this does not preclude criminal liability, which squarely falls under police jurisdiction.

3. Coercive Financial Routing, Dowry-Linked Payments & Alleged Land Fraud

Over the course of [REDACTED] strained matrimonial relationship, substantial sums of money were demanded and routed under pressure at the direction of Mr. Deepakji Daga. These transfers bypassed lawful or contractual justifications and were carried out through third-party accounts based on coercive influence, verbal pressure, and written instructions (including WhatsApp messages) issued directly by Mr. Daga.

Examples of Coerced Transactions and Irregular Routing:

- Deposits made into the sole account of Smt. [REDACTED], without legal obligation, documentation, or involvement of her spouse—indicating isolated and externally directed financial control.
- Payments made toward high-value jewellery at Kabra Jewellers for Mr. Daga's son's wedding, unrelated to any duty or benefit owed by me.
- Transfers to Mr. [REDACTED]al Pujari Singh, an associate of Mr. Daga in his CA practice, lacking commercial rationale or contractual explanation.
- Foreign remittances, including tuition payments to Monash University (Australia) for Mr. Daga's family, routed through [REDACTED] funds without legal basis or transparency.

These transactions raise serious red flags:

- Absence of formal agreements, legal necessity, or documented family consensus.
- Execution based on direct verbal and WhatsApp-based written instructions from Mr. Daga.
- Diversion of funds to benefit unrelated individuals, under implied or direct threats.
- Systematic exclusion of key family members, such as [REDACTED] father-in-law, from decisions.

These actions reflect a pattern of financial coercion and extortion sustained through misuse of personal influence, threats of false legal cases, and systemic intimidation. The opacity and structure of these transactions also raise reasonable suspicion of financial offences under:

- Benami Transactions (Prohibition) Act
- Prevention of Money Laundering Act (PMLA)
- FEMA, Black Money Act
- Income Tax and banking regulations

Alleged Fraud in Land Transaction

Additionally, [REDACTED] was induced to make substantial payments toward a land transaction supposedly arranged by Mr. Daga. Despite collecting money and offering repeated verbal and WhatsApp assurances, he refused to execute legal registration, offering no written agreement or refund.

When [REDACTED] questioned this, he resorted to threats involving misuse of dowry laws and reputational damage to suppress resistance. This constitutes:

- Breach of trust
- Potential criminal misappropriation
- Real estate fraud under coercion and undue influence

As a Chartered Accountant, Mr. Daga used his professional stature to create a false sense of legitimacy around these transactions, violating his fiduciary duties and exploiting his financial authority. A formal complaint has already been submitted to the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India (ICAI) regarding these actions. However, this does not limit the criminal liability, which warrants a full investigation under applicable law.

4. Criminal Intimidation: Threats of Violence, Custodial Harm & Coercive Abuse of Influence

Over an extended period, Mr. Deepakji Daga repeatedly issued threats designed to instill fear, force compliance, and obstruct resistance. These included:

- Threats of death or physical elimination,
- Threats of false dowry and criminal cases,
- Warnings of arrest and harm in police custody, and
- Threats of fabricated income tax raids and reputational destruction.

He often invoked his alleged connections with police, judiciary, politicians, and tax officials, suggesting that he could “fix” cases, control outcomes, or cause extrajudicial harm if challenged.

These threats created a sustained climate of fear and coercion, directly impacting [REDACTED] ability to protect myself, resist unlawful demands, or assert my rights as a [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]. I am willing to submit relevant supporting material, including communications and recordings, to the investigating authorities if required

5. Unlawful Custody Interference and Coercive Control Over Minor Child

Mr. Deepakji Daga unlawfully interfered with [REDACTED] parental rights by physically inserting himself between [REDACTED] [REDACTED], and [REDACTED] minor [REDACTED]—without any legal, judicial, or administrative authority.

On one occasion, he detained [REDACTED] inside his Chartered Accountant office and actively prevented me from meeting [REDACTED], despite [REDACTED] lawful custodial status and the absence of any restraining order or police instruction. This resulted in the forcible separation of a [REDACTED] from [REDACTED] child, carried out through intimidation and coercive influence.

Mr. Daga had no lawful standing—parental, judicial, or official—to:

- Restrict access between parent and child,
- Detain or control custody of [REDACTED] minor [REDACTED] or Intervene in matrimonial or custody matters.

His conduct was deliberate, not incidental. It was clearly aimed at:

- Disrupting parental bonding,
- Pressuring marital separation and divorce, and
- Controlling [REDACTED]’s decisions during periods of emotional vulnerability.

Such interference lacked due process or family consensus, and is consistent with a broader pattern of coercion and misuse of informal influence outlined elsewhere in this complaint.

These actions:

- Violated [REDACTED] custodial and parental rights,
- Endangered [REDACTED]’s emotional welfare, and

- Warrant investigation under provisions related to child protection, custodial interference, and criminal intimidation.

5A. International Parental Child Abduction – Cross-Border Removal Without Custody Orders

My minor [REDACTED] is a [REDACTED] citizen. Without [REDACTED] consent and in violation of lawful custodial rights, [REDACTED] was:

- First removed from the [REDACTED] to India, and Later relocated from India to [REDACTED], all without any court oversight or custody orders from competent Indian or [REDACTED] authorities.

This constitutes a confirmed case of international parental child abduction, as defined by the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction, to which India is a signatory (though not yet a formal party). Indian courts have nevertheless applied Hague principles in relevant custody matters.

This cross-border removal raises serious child endangerment concerns, particularly in light of:

- Documented psychological instability and supernatural claims made by [REDACTED] in sworn court pleadings,
- Mr. Daga's coercive control over family decisions despite having no legal guardianship, and
- A consistent pattern of interference with custody and reconciliation efforts.

I respectfully request that the police investigate these cross-border removals as part of a broader inquiry into child endangerment, unlawful custody interference, and criminal conspiracy under Indian law.

6. Intrusion into Matrimonial Relationship and Coercive Interference in Marital Stability

Despite having no legal or familial role, Mr. Deepakji Daga persistently interfered in [REDACTED] marriage, undermined reconciliation, and exerted coercive influence to promote separation and financial leverage.

Specifically, Mr. Daga:

- Directly incited marital breakdown, including repeated statements that [REDACTED] should be "connected to someone richer from his circle."
- Excluded her father from key reconciliation efforts, maintaining personal control over decisions that affected our family.
- Discouraged reconciliation, reportedly fearing it would require return of funds and reduce his influence.

These actions constitute deliberate intrusion into a protected marital relationship, amounting to criminal conspiracy under Section 61, BNS, and abetment of separation for personal and financial benefit.

Given Mr. Daga's broader institutional affiliations—including his role as treasurer of Balbodhini Paathshala, an entity associated with groups within the Vallabhkul tradition—his influence should not be seen in isolation.

In the public domain, multiple survivor accounts and verified media reports have documented instances where individuals acting under the guise of spiritual or community authority have:

- Manipulated emotionally vulnerable family members,
- Discouraged lawful marital reconciliation,
- Interfered in spousal decisions for ideological or exploitative ends,
- Or, in some cases, abetted coercion or moral impropriety.

⚠️ I make no personal allegation against Mr. Daga or any religious group. However, I respectfully submit that his conduct aligns with documented patterns of coercive influence and misuse of informal authority that have surfaced in related contexts.

This issue is not merely personal—it intersects with criminal law, family rights, and institutional accountability. I request that this pattern of influence be examined as part of motive and broader conspiracy, especially when viewed alongside the threats, financial coercion, and control tactics described elsewhere.

6A. Superstition-Based Narratives and Psychological Destabilisation (For Record and Welfare Inquiry)

During matrimonial and custody proceedings, [REDACTED] made sworn statements and communications describing experiences of seeing ghosts, evil spirits, human sacrifices, and other supernatural threats. These narratives were relied upon to justify fear, separation, refusal of reconciliation, and withdrawal from counseling or family dialogue.

[REDACTED] do not allege the truth or existence of any supernatural phenomena. However, the repeated invocation of such narratives disrupted reconciliation efforts, destabilised [REDACTED] family environment, and adversely impacted [REDACTED] access to [REDACTED] and child.

Multiple survivor accounts and expert commentary in the public domain have documented how belief systems involving concepts such as “pashu tantra”, “black magic”, “vashikaran,” “sammohan” “akarshan,” and “ucchattan” may be misused to induce fear, dependency, or disengagement from family bonds—especially when introduced during periods of emotional distress or conflict. Such influences may stem from manipulation, trauma, or suggestion-based conditioning rather than any bona fide religious or spiritual practice.

In support of this concern, I possess messages from Mr. Deepakji Daga—sent via encrypted platforms—where he proposed that [REDACTED] consult certain astrologers and undertake costly rituals (poojas) during periods of marital instability. Upon inquiry, these rituals appeared to be conducted by unverified individuals with no clear scriptural basis in mainstream Hindu practice. While I do not allege religious impropriety, the timing, nature, and lack of transparency surrounding these proposals raise serious questions about undue influence and the use of non-scientific methods to shape decisions during a period of emotional vulnerability.

Given Mr. Daga's ongoing influence over family decisions, his role in discouraging reconciliation, and his association with institutions where such belief systems are not uncommon, I respectfully submit that this aspect merits professional, trauma-informed evaluation by relevant welfare authorities.

This submission is made solely to safeguard [REDACTED]'s mental health, protect [REDACTED] child's emotional well-being, and ensure that future judicial and counseling interventions are guided by evidence-based, professional understanding—not fear-based narratives or superstition.

Where appropriate, I request that relevant authorities assess these issues under applicable mental health, child welfare, and anti-superstition frameworks, including state-specific laws.

7. Suppression of Resistance and Obstruction of Justice Through Intimidation and Coercive Influence

Whenever I questioned the financial demands or resisted coercion, Mr. Deepakji Daga responded with a consistent pattern of threats and manipulation, including:

- Threats of false criminal cases under dowry and domestic violence laws,
- Warnings of arrest or custodial harm, citing his alleged influence in police and tax departments,
- Attempts to isolate [REDACTED] from [REDACTED] and child during periods of marital discord,
- Intimidation of my in-laws, including discouraging [REDACTED] father-in-law from attending reconciliation meetings.

Mr. Daga consistently inserted himself between me and [REDACTED] in-laws, reportedly pressuring them to act as proxies for his financial demands and to keep him involved for purposes of leverage and control. This also served to suppress any opposition to the unlawful demands being made.

At times, he instigated hostility, including encouraging [REDACTED] to act violently or file anticipatory complaints. Some of this conduct is reflected in police records filed in the United States, which I am prepared to submit for verification if required.

This pattern had a chilling effect on my ability to resist or seek fair redress. It amounts to:

- Criminal intimidation (Sec 138, BNS)
- Threat of false implication (Sec 140, BNS)
- Obstruction of justice (Sec 187, BNS)
- Criminal conspiracy (Sec 61, BNS)

The objective appears to have been to maintain financial pressure, derail reconciliation, and misuse legal systems to extract monetary settlements.

8. Indicative Legal Provisions Attracted

Without limiting police discretion, the facts disclosed in this complaint constitute serious and cognizable offences under multiple provisions of Indian law, including but not limited to:

- BNS Section 85 – Cruelty and dowry-related harassment
 - BNS Section 69 – Extortion
 - BNS Section 61 – Criminal conspiracy
 - BNS Section 316 – Cheating and dishonest inducement (applicable to alleged land fraud)
 - BNS Section 317 – Breach of trust
 - BNS Section 138 – Criminal intimidation
 - BNS Section 140 – Threat of false implication
 - Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 – Giving, taking, or abetting dowry
 - Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act – Unlawful custody interference and endangerment of a minor
 - Prohibition of Benami Property Transactions Act – Suspicious routing of funds via third-party accounts
 - Prevention of Money Laundering Act (PMLA) – Subject to fund flow investigation
 - Income Tax laws – For possible tax evasion
 - Provisions under relevant state-level Anti-Superstition / Black Magic laws – Subject to inquiry, where applicable, based on influencing behavior through unverified occult practices or questionable rituals
